Jed Blackburn advises clients in matters of advocacy and dispute resolution with a particular focus on commercial litigation, higher education, administrative, and employment law. He has worked with a wide variety of clients ranging from educational institutions to small businesses to multinational corporations.

Jed has successfully acted as counsel in matters before both administrative tribunals and the courts, including the Ontario Court of Appeal, the Ontario Superior Court of Justice, the Ontario Divisional Court, the Newfoundland and Labrador Supreme Court (Trial Division), the Human Rights Tribunal of Ontario, the Ontario Labour Relations Board, and the Landlord and Tenant Board.

He has extensive experience in helping companies and universities resolve disputes both prior to and during litigation, as well as managing reputational concerns. Jed's experience includes:

- Defending actions based on alleged breach of contract, negligence, fraud, defamation, malicious prosecution, sexual assault, and discrimination
- Negotiating settlements of commercial disputes and class action proceedings
- Advising employers on employee terminations and resolving wrongful dismissal claims and human rights complaints
- Representing clients in leasing disputes and advising on the enforceability of lease provisions
- Responding to judicial review applications challenging academic policies and procedures
- Advising universities on risk management issues, including threats to members of the university community
- Drafting university bylaws and advising on governance issues

In addition, Jed is a regular contributor to employerlawblog.ca, which follows current trends in Canadian employment law with a particular focus on issues faced by Ontario employers.
